Dear Jonathan,

On behalf of the Progressive Policy Institute (PPI), I'd like to invite you to join us for a transatlantic dialogue in Rome, Brussels, and Paris from Monday, November 4 to Friday, November 8, 2019. This bipartisan mission is designed for senior congressional staff.

This will be PPI's seventh trip organizing top-level meetings in Europe with our transatlantic allies and partners. In a time of escalating trade tensions, a slowing global economy, and political instability, PPI believes it has never been more important for U.S. policy professionals to discuss and learn about European views not represented in the domestic press.

This mission will cover a wide range of topics and the schedule is not for the faint of heart; you will see much of Europe in a short period of time! As new leadership takes office, we will engage with policymakers about the changing dynamics between the European Union and the United States on issues of international taxation and political cooperation.

Specifically, this mission will hold meetings directly relating to:

- Who has the rightful claim to revenue from "digital taxes" on American businesses – the EU or the US?
- What international tax challenges were created (or solved) by the 2017 tax law?
- What lessons can the U.S. learn from other developed nations about how best to raise revenue?
- How does Europe's treatment of growing immigrant and refugee populations compare to the US?
- As radical governments from Greece to Italy collapse, has populism run its course?
- What is the "Macron Vision" for Europe?
- How will new EU leadership break from its predecessors?

PPI is a non-profit 501 (c) (3) organization with the mission of providing educational programming on current policy issues. As such, this mission will comply with House and Senate ethics rules. PPI was part of the founding and push for the "Third Way" movement in the 1990s and has continued this work since then by maintaining relationships in Europe and producing informative and thought-provoking transatlantic missions and reports.

I hope that you will be able to join us in what promises to be an insightful and educational mission to Europe. Space is limited; please contact Ben Ritz at 202-516-5588 or britz@ppionline.org if you have questions or require further information.
